

Restoration Party Harmony At Democratic Convention An Almost Impossible Task

Strike Having Become so Bitter Between Smith and McAdoo Adherents.

RUMP CONVENTION TALK

We heard an East-West, Tammany, Anti-Tammany, Klan and Klan and Protestant-Catholic break-up and clashes occur often.

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
(Copyright by The Daily Courier)
MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, July 5.—East is East and West is West and apparently never the twain shall meet in Democratic politics.

The age-old fight between Tammany Hall and its affiliated organizations of boss control in New Jersey, Massachusetts and Illinois on the one hand and the rest of the country on the other, came to a head in the Clark-Wilson fight of 1912 and again in the San Francisco convention of 1920 and today it is the underlying reason for the deadlock which has prevented the Democratic National Convention from making a presidential nomination after two weeks of stormy sessions.

Blissness, however, is of unprecedented intensity to each other. Almost to the point of contempt, anger and wrath which has at times almost resulted in fist fights, has given the convention plenty of excitement but little promise of harmony even when nominations shall have been made. The allies and enemies are numerous. He who would be impartial cannot but recognize that in many respects the leaders have acted like a lot of schoolboys.

The injection of the Ku Klux Klan issue has been fatal. Try as they might the McAdoo delegates cannot erase the impression that they have been supported by the Klan. Try as they might the Smith delegates cannot conceal the fact that they believe the Anti-Smith sentiment is not more than a disguise for an Anti-Catholic feeling. It has gone to such a point that many leaders openly say the Democratic ticket will be deserted by Catholics generally before any votes will be cast for McAdoo. To this William Jennings Bryan answers that he sees no reason why he should be nominated, meeting Smith, because of his church and he says that is how the situation is rapidly developing.

The stubbornness that has been keeping the deadlock tight and tends to make it tighter is, however, not altogether the Protestant-Catholic feeling which has been engendered here. The McAdoo delegates from western and southern states insist that they have been burning electoral votes to the Democratic ticket more often than have New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Connecticut, Illinois and Massachusetts, which are the principal states asking for Smith's nomination. Certainly Pennsylvania never goes Democratic and Illinois almost never. But to this the Smith men make reply that the reason the big states do not go Democratic is they never have a candidate who appeals to the Eastern states, whereas the McAdoo leaders retort that the east would not support even Woodrow Wilson in 1916 and that the states which contributed to the Democratic victory, that year, namely the west and south, should have the right to name the party leader here.

As if the Klan issue and the sectionalism that were not enough, the attitude of the convention toward some of the prominent men in the party has been hardly one of the courtesy. The Smith men, blessed and jeered and booed William Jennings Bryan, three times the nominee of his party, and then when the Smith people wanted the New York governor to address the convention, the McAdoo delegates did the best they could and refused to vote for the invitation, so it was lost. Then McAdoo wrote a letter to the convention, urging that Smith be permitted to speak, but the governor's friends were so angry they objected to a reconsideration.

The truth is that McAdoo delegates thought the invitation to let the governor speak was unfair. The convention had just voted down a proposal to have all the candidates speak and the Smith men, for some reason or other not yet explained, then put in another resolution inviting Governor Smith alone. It was freely remarked by Smith men that the object of the move was to put the McAdoo men "in a hole," since they couldn't, it was believed, refuse to hear the governor of the state in which the convention was being held, particularly when it was his own home town. But they did, and they said that if the governor's friends wanted to have him address the convention in his capacity as governor and as not a candidate, he should have been put on the program at the outset with Mayor J. P. Ryan.

And so the quarrel has run and no matter who made the mistakes of Connellsville on Page Two.

Troop 5 Wins Seven Events in Boy Scout Meet

Troop 6 of Connellsville easily won the district Scout meet at Fayette Field Friday morning, with Troop 1 coming in second, Troop 3, third, the Dunbar Troop, fourth and Troop 10, last. Troop 5 took seven firsts in 10 events. In the other events it topped second.

The troops showed signs of preparation, and the meet, in general, was praised by the judges. Winning saw an out of 10 events in held to be a rare occurrence and it is believed to be a record in Scout circles. By winning seven firsts and three seconds, the troop had 44 points out of a possible 60.

Vanderbilt and Wheeler troops did not appear, thinking that the meet would be called off due to inclement weather. The meet did not get under way until 11:15 on account of the rain.

Although under ordinary conditions few persons are brought to Baltimore by the Tropic Rivers, she was loaded to capacity because of the crowd that went to see the fourth annual Chesapeake boat races.

12,000 IN ATTENDANCE

Special to The Courier.
MOUNT PLEASANT, July 5.—One of the largest Klan celebrations in Pennsylvania was held in the Wadsworth farm, several miles up the mountain from Mount Pleasant, on Thursday morning. The celebration was held on the grounds of the Fourth Klan, which had been organized in the area.

The crowd was not so large on account of rain but it was estimated that 12,000 persons were in attendance. On the grounds a well was drilled, an electric light plant erected and a large bonfire was burned.

The heavy rain last night made it impossible for some of the cars to move out of the fields and the cars were left in the fields. The celebration was held in the afternoon and the speakers were: Gilbert Nations, candidate for president on the American Party, Dr. Peoples of Pittsburg, Sam Rich of Pittsburg and Dr. Tabor of Texas.

CHILD OF FOUR LOST TWO DAYS, TWO NIGHTS IN BULLSKIN WOODS

Searchers Find Little Albert Beverage as Shades of Third Night Descend.

After wandering about on the top of the ridge between Ridgeway school and the road leading from Mud School toward Bear Rocks from Tuesday morning until Thursday evening, a four-year-old boy, Albert Beverage, was found in the depth of the woods near the old David Greenwalt place, three miles from his home.

Edward Baker and Frank Rittenour, who live on farms near Paradise, located the child by his cries after they had followed a trail of blood marks on stones. It was 7:45 o'clock and the child was weeping bitterly as the shades of night drew on for the third time since he had wandered away.

Several hundred persons joined in the search. It was estimated that as many as 300 scoured the top of the mountain between Bear Rocks and Laurelville, from Southwood School to Paradise, an area of more than 10 square miles. Joining in the search were members of the Scottdale fire department, Boy Scouts from Jones Mill and scores of farmers from all the region in which the alarm had been sounded.

From what could be learned, the child had been picking strawberries at his home on the farm. Then he had wandered into the woods and had been wandering about for some time. The child was found in a cave. It was said that this handful of food was all Albert had from the time he wandered off until after he was taken home Thursday night.

The child was clad only in a thin romper suit, without shoes or stockings. Feet and legs and hands, arms and face were scorched where he had scrambled through brush and briars.

Baker and Rittenour were about to give up the search for the day when they discovered a bloodstain, evidently from a cut on the foot. Soon afterward they heard cries.

The young men carried the child to the home of Jacob Kent, some distance away. By a pre-arrangement the child was taken to the hospital at his disappearance and had suffered the time to look for him. His right leg was badly cut and loss of blood was the cause of death. He had been dead for some time. A pocket dog, Mr. Casey's pet, which accompanied him to and from the mine, was found at the mouth of the workings and this caused the searchers to enter the mine.

Mr. Casey is survived by his widow, his children, his mother, Mrs. Catherine Barrett of Dunbar, and several brothers and sisters including Mrs. Catherine Stephens of Dunbar, Mrs. Charlotte Tarr of Tarr, Edward of Blinn and James of Dunbar.

A pocket dog, Mr. Casey's pet, which accompanied him to and from the mine, was found at the mouth of the workings and this caused the searchers to enter the mine.

Two Attempts to Suspend Rules Fail; Plan to Move To Kansas City Defeated

Compromise Candidate Is Monday Plan

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, July 5.—The nomination of a compromise candidate on Monday is now the program of the Democratic National Convention.

After hours of fruitless balloting today, followed by conferences among leaders, the convention at 3:40 P. M. (daylight saving time) adopted a resolution calling on the candidates and their representatives to confer with Chairman Walsh and Cordell Hull of the National Committee upon a program of procedure and selection of a man to be nominated.

The convention then adjourned until Monday.

25 FRICK FIRST AID TEAMS PARTICIPATE IN ELIMINATION CONTESTS

Twenty-five first aid teams of the H. C. Frick Coke Company plants took part in elimination contests that were held at Trotter, Standard, Edensboro and Continental No. 2 mines Wednesday afternoon. In selecting contestants for the grand first aid contest that will be held at Leisenring No. 1 on Saturday, July 12, unusual interest is manifest in first aid activities in the Frick coke plants. The teams went through the winter and spring months training consistently in an effort to win in the elimination and final contests. The work was directed by E. C. Bell of Scottdale who had men representing him at the several mines. Mr. Bell was in charge of the contest at Standard, with J. E. Struble in charge at Trotter, C. L. Luton at Edensboro and R. R. Graft officiating at Continental No. 2 and Leisenring. The teams were divided into two groups, Standard, while Lambert and Edensboro finished first and second in the contest at Edensboro.

Mrs. A. B. Kurtz Severely Cut in Motor Accident

Mrs. A. B. Kurtz of East Fairview avenue, her sister Mrs. Fannie Shaffer of Chicago and George G. Kurtz, 15 years old, of Fairmont, W. Va., were painfully but not seriously injured Friday morning when the Kurtz sedan, driven by Mr. Kurtz, was struck by a machine, driven by George L. Kerr of Fairmont. The accident occurred near the junction of the Dunbar-Connellsville road and is said to have been unavoidable. The Kerr car skidded on the concrete road, which was made slippery by the rain, and in attempting to drive it back onto the road the machine swerved and crashed into the Kurtz car, both machines being badly damaged.

Mrs. Kurtz suffered an ugly cut of the head, it requiring several stitches to close the wound, and a slight cut under the chin. Mrs. Shaffer was cut above the left eye, the wound also having to be closed by stitches. Both are resting easy today.

Two Motions to Eliminate Low Candidate Each Ballot Quickly Voted Down

RELIGIOUS FEELING STRONG

Deadlock Described as Similar to What Might Develop in Any Community When Religious Questions Over Religious Questions.

By United Press.
MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, July 5.—Desperate attempts to bring the leaders of the opposing factions in the Democratic convention into some kind of conference were being made this afternoon in the hope of breaking the deadlock.

Governor Al Smith left the Manhattan Club hurriedly around 1 o'clock. Then Chairman Walsh, Cordell Hull, chairman of the National Committee, Homer S. Cummings and others met in conference in the Garden. Later they were joined by Judge Rockwell, McAdoo's manager, and Bruce Kramer, one of his lieutenants. Tom Taggart of Indiana appeared to have brought about the session in the Garden and was an active figure.

After being closeted in a secret session for 45 minutes the entire group left the Garden and started up town. There was much speculation as to whether they were going to meet Smith but their destination could not be learned immediately.

Meanwhile the balloting in the convention continued. The breaking up of the Ohio delegation over the field and in Indiana, setting Governor Smith 26 votes on the 74th ballot, furnished the high lights of the dull casting of votes. Smith on his ballot reached a new high mark of 765.

At 2:45 Governor Smith had returned to the Manhattan Club but had not seen Chairman Walsh or any of the others. Walsh was located later and declared that several propositions had been advanced but that none had yet been agreed upon.

George Brennan of Illinois, the stand patist of the Smith stand patists, said no progress had been made in the conferences. Brennan predicted adjournment soon until Monday morning.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, July 5.—A motion to suspend the two thirds rule and give the candidate having the highest vote at the end of five ballots the nomination was defeated at noon by the Democratic National Convention. A near riot was precipitated.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, July 5.—Every attempt to suspend the rules and take some slight step toward breaking the deadlock in the Democratic convention today failed. It appeared this afternoon that only some peace-maker who can bring the warring factions together for a conference will be able to bring the convention to nomination of a Presidential candidate.

Two attempts to suspend the rules and adopt the resolution which would provide for elimination of the candidate setting the lowest ballot failed during the early session. The second attempt of the day was embodied in a resolution presented by Senator J. Hitchcock and provided that the rule of elimination of the low candidate should apply for today only. But it failed, as other similar motions have failed.

Alabama, with Underwood, and Virginia, with Carter Glass, voted solidly against it. The resolution would have permitted five to remain in the race, but the lines are drawn so tight and the determination to "fight this thing out" along present lines has taken such hold that there appears to be slight hope of any break on the floor.

The convention had cast its 73rd ballot when the vote on the Hitchcock motion was taken. The rule would have become effective after the 75th ballot, but since it was voted down the only procedure remaining was to continue balloting.

William J. Bryan was asked when he thought the convention would adjourn and replied that it would remain in session "until the cows come home" if necessary to nominate McAdoo.

The religious bitterness that was stirred up in the Klan fight last Saturday is very much in evidence in the balloting, both on candidates and on motions to suspend the rules. It is a deadlock such as might be reached in any community when neighbors start a religious argument.

A motion to adjourn the convention to meet in Kansas City to resume balloting was defeated by roll call.

71st ballot—Smith, 833 1-2; McAdoo, 628 1-2; Davis, 68; Underwood, 71 1-2; Glass, 23; Robinson, 21; Owen, 2; Hitchcock, 1 1-2; Saulsbury, 6; Baker, 56; Bryan, 3; Walsh, 1.

72nd ballot—Smith, 834 1-2; McAdoo, 587 1-2; Davis, 66 1-2; Underwood, 37 1-2; Glass, 23; Robinson, 21; Owen, 2; Ritchie, 16 1-2; Saulsbury, 6; Baker, 57 1-2; Walsh, 1; Bryan, 3.

The Paramount

"BEHIND TWO GUNS," with J. B. Warner in the stellar role and the second chapter of "The Fast Express" featuring William Duncan, provide interesting entertainment today at the Paramount.

"Behind Two Guns," which was written and directed by Robert North Bradbury, is something different in the way of western features. While it has all the thrills that Warner usually gives, it is going to keep any audience busy trying to figure it out. At any rate local fans are slated for a real treat in seeing this latest Sunset sensation. The story of "The Fast Express" itself is a fast one: a lightning-like succession of thrills and sensations; desperate battles; exciting rescue and narrow escapes that hold the audience spell-bound throughout every scene of the plot.

Monday and Tuesday, Gaston Glass will appear in "Masters-in-Law."

The Soisson

"SINNER OR SAINT" with Betty Lytell, surrounded with a capable cast, appearing in the leading role, is the feature picture today at the Soisson.

In this picture, Miss Lytell plays the role of a fake fortune-teller who is converted to a better life by a young philanthropist. This young man believes that crime is, rather wholly "good" or "bad" and the main theme of the picture develops his gradual awakening to the fact that people are nothing of the sort; that they are a mixture of both, and for that reason, not devils or angels, but human beings.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, "Why Get Married" with Andree Lafayette in the stellar role, will be shown.

The Orpheum

"MILE-A-MINUTE ROMEO" showing today at the Orpheum, presents Tom Mix in one of the best roles of his screen career.

It is a drama of fast-living in the West that Buffalo Bill knew. Wherever man is, intrigue will be, is the only moral that can be ascribed from the fast motion. The story, penned by Max Brand, the widely-recognized novelist, reads of Western action and love, nothing more, but these are handled in the most with Tom Mix, are Betty Lowell, J. Gordon Russell, James Mason, Duke Lee and James Quinn.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, "Thy Name is Woman," with Ramon Novarro and Barbara La Marr in the leading roles will be shown.

Activity of Blast Furnaces is a True Business Barometer

What is termed "the most simple and reliable single indicator we have of conditions in industry and business," has been devised by Colonel L. P. Ayers, vice president and statistical expert of the Cleveland Trust Company.

His claim is that the rate of activity at the blast furnaces shows the almost exact status of business. His researches show that over a 30-year period the average or normal level is 60 per cent of the total available smelting capacity operating at once. During the peak of activity, the percentage has been as high as 90 to 95 per cent, while in times of depression the percentage has dropped to 25 per cent and during the recent depression of 1921 it was as low as 15 per cent.

At the present time it is 48 per cent. The others have been blown out and are inactive. As recent as two months ago the percentage in operation was 66 per cent.

"The value of the barometer as an indicator of the condition of general business," said Col. Ayers, "becomes particularly evident if one studies it in connection with the movement of bond prices. The market value of these securities tends to rise in periods of depression and to fall in times of prosperity.

"One rule which would have operated almost completely as to dependability during the past 30 years would have been to buy bonds whenever the number of blast furnaces in blast fell below 60 per cent of the total and to have sold them again whenever furnace activity recovered and passed above the normal line of 60 per cent.

Exports of Coke During Month April

During April 45,325 tons of coke were exported from the United States. The largest tonnage, 29,010, went to Canada. France was the next most liberal buyer taking 7,248 tons. Chile next with 4,008 tons. Italy, was third, 3,804 tons, followed by Mexico, 1,800 tons, and Cuba, 881 tons.

The Dominican Republic took 24 tons, Costa Rica, nine tons; Guatemala, six tons; Honduras, five tons; Panama and Venezuela, four tons each. The smallest shipments were of one ton each to Colombia and Trinidad.

Definite Decline Takes Place in Price Furnace Coke, Bringing it to $3

Region Operators With Back Some Business Formerly Going to By-Products

BUYERS SEEK LOW PRICES

For Furnace Coke to Meet Primary Demand Quiet, Prices Show as Many Times Consumer More Discriminating; No Coal Cuts.

(From The Weekly Courier)

PITTSBURGH, July 1.—Furnace coke has had a definite decline in the past week, from being yesterday at $3.25 an ton, to $3.00, marked by important sales. Two lots of July coke, aggregating 15,000 tons, went at the $3.00 price, leaving no room for question that that is the actual market.

It cannot be said that the market declined all of 20 cents in the week, for the $3.25 quotation has been brought by a small lot of coke, at $3.00 or close to that figure, but the sales were chiefly to small consumers, outside the iron industry, most of whom did not care whether they were furnished standard furnace coke or not.

The two most important transactions of the week were the sales for delivery over July, amounting to about 6,000 tons, for Jackson, Ohio, of the Jackson Iron & Steel Company, and $3.00, for the Adrian Furnace Company.

In these transactions the Connellsville coke trade may be said to have had a "come back," as the two furnaces involved had been taking Pittsburgh coke for a short time, having previously lost the business.

There has been only a moderate volume of business this week, and prompt furnace coke, as a matter of fact, nearly all the furnace coke that Connellsville coke are new out of blast and it does not require much market activity either in order to get the coke to sell, or to get the small amount of merchant coke being produced.

When buyers do get into the market they are keen to get the lowest possible price. They talk a great deal about "bidding" in a district, and the distinction is drawn in the matter of quality. With standard furnace coke, as low producers are distressed to make much of a discount on medium sulphur coke or cutting coke and it is doubtful whether any heating coke of good grade could be bought as low as $2.75.

Foundry coke is still more quiet as to demand, and shows a tendency to go to price, but it is not definitely quotable at lower than the range given in The Courier reports in the past six weeks, $4.50 to $5.00.

Most of the foundries are operating at rather low rates, and their coke requirements are in proportion. In addition, they have been particularly reserved about buying at this mid-year time, and altogether the foundry coke turnover in the past week has been very light.

The ordinary going price for good quality standard foundry coke for spot shipment is $4.50. Several brands are held at higher figures, even above $5.00, but there are practically no sales at above $5.00, and there are few even at this figure. Various descriptions of 72-hour coke are offered at below $4.50 but it is a question whether any of them would grade as standard foundry coke. Such coke is not sold readily at standard prices because more discrimination of late, and so in for quality, especially when quality costs so little extra.

At least two producers of high grade foundry coke have a contract quotation of $5.00. One of the three producers to sell only month by month. The other producers to sell only for the third quarter, the customer in the latter case will sell for the half-year. The total amount of contract business done thus far is small. The market is quotable as follows:

	Spot	Foundry
Spot furnace	$3.00	$4.50
Spot foundry	$4.50	$5.00
Contract furnace	$3.00	$4.50
Contract foundry	$4.50	$5.00

Average prices of spot coke month by month since the first of the year have been as follows:

	Jan.	Feb.	Mar.	Apr.	May	June
Furnace	$3.25	$3.15	$3.05	$2.95	$2.85	$2.75
Foundry	$4.75	$4.65	$4.55	$4.45	$4.35	$4.25

The Pittsburgh district coal market has shown no improvement in the past week, nor has it lost any more ground. At least one large operator had slightly larger shipments in June than in May, but the market was almost negligible. In general the district has been operating at nearly or quite 20 per cent of capacity since April 1, with very little change from month to month. Regular steam mine-run coal is quotable in the open market at $1.75 to $2.00 and at such prices there is very little sale for it on account of the much lower prices available in numerous foreign markets in the United States where the Pittsburgh district has important freight advantages.

The pig iron market, which had a burst of activity, a decidedly mild one in the first three weeks of June, has relaxed into the dullness to which it must have become pretty well accustomed between the May and June movements. The market was quiet in the first three weeks of June, and the pig iron market has sold at 50 cents in some cases, but even this week the former price of $11 has been obtained on single carload sales, so that the market is now at a range, and otherwise unchanged, the

1,800 BOSTON STREETS TO BE GIVEN NEW NAMES

Duplication in the Names of Thoroughfares Causes Confusion, City Officials Say.

Boston.—With a movement under way to change the names of nearly 1,800 Boston thoroughfares, this city's tangled street situation, ever the base of the visitors and travelers, may be unraveled by next year, in so far as duplication in names is concerned.

Chairman John M. L. Moyes of the street commission has laid plans for one of the greatest municipal christening parties ever carried out. Impressed more and more by the complications arising from the repetition of identical street names in various districts of the city, and sometimes even in the same district, Chairman Moyes has enlisted the aid of facts showing that Boston has six Washington streets and five Washington places within the city limits, not including Washington Street North.

He has found that there are six streets named after the well-known Adams family, but that in addition four "blind alleys" in various streets go by the name of "Adams place." Six other streets bear the name "West."

Altogether, the number of duplications reaches the enormous total of 1,800, yet an aggregate of 2,484 avenues, courts, parks, places, roads, squares, streets and terraces.

On the list of 3,100 street names where duplication occurs approximately 1,800 distinctly different names appear. Basing their calculation on these figures, the officials have estimated that the difference represents the number of streets which must be renamed, approximately 1,800 in all.

Further removal of the city's street lists reveals five Auburn streets, five Everett streets, five Elm streets, five Everett streets, five High streets, five Park streets, five State streets, five Water streets. There are five separate Lincoln places. There are four Brook streets and three Brooks places. Four streets bear the name of Allen and four more are named Allison. Similar instances occur almost indefinitely.

Chairman Moyes has admitted the magnitude of his task in finding 1,800 new names for thoroughfares. Besides soliciting suggestions from Bostonians, his board will study the street lists of other cities and towns in the United States.

A Necessity of Today

A few years ago an automobile was considered a luxury. How different are things today! An automobile is now a necessity. The farmer uses it daily going to and from town; the town dweller uses it to go to and from work; the wife uses it to do her shopping and to take the kiddies out in the country. There are hundreds of uses and the FLINT will answer all of them.

When the FLINT was being designed the critics shook their heads. They all agreed that it was impossible to build a car, of the excellence of the FLINT, at the price.

But it was possible! And the FLINT is in a class by itself. Where can you find a car today that is so well designed and constructed, that has such a strong, sturdy engine, that has such graceful lines and that sells at a price near the price of the FLINT. They'll stand comparisons with cars priced as high as $2,700.

Come in and see this car—or better still ask for a demonstration. You'll agree that Durant knew what he was talking about when he said "Quite Good Enough."

Putting Your Motor Mind On It

How Accidents Occur When Drivers Are NOT Thinking About What They Are Doing. Taking the Wheel—Intercepting Experiment Proves Average Driver's Ignorance of Need for Putting His Mind on His Driving in Advance.

By WILLIAM ULLMAN.

Concentration, as a requirement of motorist, was never more prominently featured than in the recent discovery that majority of automobile accidents occur when drivers do not have their minds on the job.

Analysis of accident statistics is showing that there is an average of one accident occurring within a few minutes after the driver has taken the wheel. Prior to this, it is pointed out, the general opinion has been that most accidents occurred when drivers were tired, or after they had been driving so many consecutive hours as to become careless.

The new turn of affairs seems to prove that the biggest safety idea of the moment is for each driver to get his mind on his driving the moment he takes the wheel instead of waiting until something starts him into concentrating on the job.

This is demonstrated by a situation that is common to motorists. Almost every driver has experienced it. You start off in the car rather tight-hearted and more or less irresponsible. About five minutes later something almost happens. It brings you to your senses with a jolt. You say to yourself, "Say, old man, this is a pretty important job—this driving a car over public roads and streets. Get down to business!"

The trouble is that too many people get down to business when it's too late. The present movement is the movement of concentration. It represents a plan to educate the average driver first to a sense of the importance of his job and, second, to the necessity for putting his mind power to work the moment he takes the wheel.

As some have put the problem, "The mind, the whole mind and nothing but the mind." (Continued on Next Page)

ing but his mind." It's a far bigger subject than appears on first thought. It isn't just a matter of taking one's driving too seriously, or of trying to make a lot of work out of what many experts find to be a very simple job. It's a matter of using the mind intelligently.

Some people get brain-fag driving. So wasteful are they of mind power and so reluctant to know the facts that would make the way easy. Others rely upon reflex actions, instincts and the possibility that other drivers on the street will know what to do in an emergency. Both types are said to complicate matters and make motoring unnecessary hazardous.

By "mind power" in motoring the experts of this idea mean, for instance, that a driver must be thinking about his driving even when he is not at the wheel. When he is taking the car out of the garage, he should be making certain inspections of the car that will satisfy him that when he puts his best mental faculties to work later the machine will be able to respond.

A driver who gives his driving serious thought will be observing enough to profit by watching traffic from some advantageous point. He will note what mistakes others make and will put himself in the position of those who are faced with unusual driving problems. He will not merely jump when someone else has a close call, but will immediately try to seek the cause and mentally apply the remedy.

One motorist has this matter so well in hand that he can decide what another driver should do when something goes wrong. He is able to see

Dollar for Dollar Value

When buying your car don't look only at the price. With some cars the initial cost is the big cost—with others it is not. When you buy a STAR CAR the first cost is your largest item. It requires very little oil and you average 20 miles to a gallon of gas. Repair bills are not large because the same high grade materials are used in the STAR CAR as are used in the higher priced cars.

Putting Your Motor Mind On It

Another car start to slide and decide instantly what the other driver could do to forestall trouble. Naturally it means much to himself in the way of safety. With this sort of practice a solution of his own problem would come more or less automatically. At least it would require very little groundwork, for much of the concentration is being done in advance.

It seems that concentrating on driving in advance is the keynote of the subject. It explains why some people can jump into their cars and drive off without the slightest bit of trouble while others will get stuck by a passing car the moment they start turning out of a parking space.

When a man takes the wheel of his car and turns on his parking space without first looking around to see that the road is clear it is a foregone conclusion that he has not been thinking in advance. It may be several minutes before he will be fully aware that he is handling an essentially dangerous vehicle, and he will be lucky indeed if he escapes being reminded of the matter by the tone of an accident or a collision.

Majority of night accidents, it is contended, occur not because drivers are tired but because they give no little attention to the job of handling the car. Their minds are on the frivolous thoughts of evening entertainment, parties, dances, songs, cafes and theatres. They tell themselves that there are fewer cars on the streets and that there is less need for caution. Mind power slacks to such a level that they are unable to cope with the most elementary problems. They drive off the road, fall to consider the possibility of curves, are caught napping when another machine darts out a side street and are at a loss when a sudden stop is demanded.

Observers have noted that more motorists disregard traffic signs and regulations at night than at any other time, and it is not because they do not see so well. Most of those who get into such trouble finally confess that they weren't thinking about regulations.

An interesting experiment will show any driver just how important mind power is in the operation of an automobile, particularly the matter of concentrating on the subject in advance of actual handling of the car. Try this:

Drive up near the entrance of a busy hotel some noon hour and sit at the wheel of the car for five minutes. Select a location where the view through the windshield will reveal the activities of traffic at a complicated street intersection. Think only of traffic and imagine yourself the man at the wheel of each car you see.

It may make you nervous, but that is part of the experiment. If you keep your mind on the traffic you will find that five minutes of it will be just about enough. You will see the dangers you never before considered. Others will seem to be "getting by" out of sheer luck. And you will be capable of driving your own car as well.
